Her wedding gown was a lovely affair, of white crepe meteor veiled in chantilly lace and made with a court train. She carried a shower bouquet of lillies of the valley, and her veil of illusion, which fell from a Juliet cap of real lace, was arranged with sprays of the same flowers. Her only ornament was a pearl pendant, the groom's gift. Mrs. W. L. Booth, of Peru, Ind., was her cousin's matron of honor and only attendant! and wore a gown of yellow charmeuse draped with shadow lace and edged with brown fur. She carled a sheef of yellow chrysanthemums.

A reception was held immediately after the ceremony, and Mr. and Mrs. Cottrell left later in the evening for a Northern honeymoon. They will be at home at 421 West Grace Street after November 1. Some of the out-oftern November 2. Some of the out-oftern November 3. Some of the out

It is of beautifully carved oak, and bears references to the battles and minor engagements in which the minor Lovat Scouts won distinction under their gallant commander during the war in South Africa. Beaufort Castle is a very stately pile, with a long, dark red facade, gray roofs, and many tur-rets and gables, a relatively modern edifice, having been erected by the late Lord Lovat some forty or fifty years ago, to replace the unpretentious little house which had been the residence of the family since the burning of the old castle in the stormy days of the 1745 Jacobite rebellion. The entrance is paneled with oak grown on the estate, and on the walls hang a collection of old weapons and arms, most of them of historic and family interest; as, for instance, the muskets carried by the Fraser Highlanders who fought in Canada and distinguished themselves at the storming of

Among the most interesting relics at Beaufort Castle are the veil worn by Mary Queen of Scots on the day of her execution, the favorite chair on which Simon Lord Lovat, surnamed the traitor, sat and dealf out justice as high sheriff of Inverness-shire, and Hogarth's striking portrait of that extraordinary peer who was so many things to so many men, and who finally, at the age of eighty, repudiated by all, met with an unmourned death at the hands of the executioner on Tower Hill, in London. blushed furiously, and then, over-taken by a species of stage fright, sat down without having said a word. As he had just returned from the war in South Africa, where he had won the Distinguished Service Order for conspicuous bravery under fire, he was the object of a good deal of sympathy. He married three years ago the Hon. Laura Lister, the very pretty daughter of Lord Ribblesdale, whom he met at linner at the house of her aunt, Mrs. The late Lord Wolverhampton, who

The late Lord Wolverhampton, who was one of the pillars of the Methodist denomination, adopted the profession of law, not as a member of the bar, but as a solicitor, being the first member of that branch of the legal profession to at branch of the egal profession to at-tain the rank of Cabinet minister, just in the same way as he was the first Methodist to ever receive a seat in the Privy Council, of which he became president. He was the acknowledged champion and representative of the Nonconformist element in England, and was the adviser of King Edward, as he had been of Queen Victoria, with regard to a number of their financial investments, as well as trustee of certain funds which they had instituted. One of his queerest idiosynerasies was his aversion to riding in a carriage with his face to the horse's tail, and although as lord president of the Privy Council he was one of the very grandest dignitaries of the realm, he used to insist on sitting with his back to the horses, the principal seat in his carriage being thus left vacant, or else occupied by one of his private secretarles.

His daughter, that is to say, the sister of the present Lord Wolverhampton, is widely known on this side of the Atlantic as a novelist, under the name of Elien Thorneycroft Fowler, mongher most popular novels being "Isabel Carnaby," and "Place and I'ower." She is married to Alfred Lawrence Felkin, who, in addition to being a government inspector of schools, is likewise something of a novelist himself.
